Other "flat work," such as maps and charts, may be usable also.

New Glades Central opens

Students will enjoy state-of-the art equipment

By Brenda Bunting and Buffie Chapman

The new Glades Central Community High School opened yesterday and over 1,800 students are enjoying a state-of-the-art facility.

The school cost $28 million to build and includes a 500 seat auditorium.

Principal Dr. Effie Grear says she has been waiting for this new school for over 10 years. The old Glades Central had many defects, including leaking roofs and gut-dated equipment.

Dr. Grear said she is excited for the students and the faculty and she is not sure who was going to be happier, the students or the staff.

The new school, which is located at Pioneer Park off State Road 715, is a good location, according to Dr. Grear. The Department of Transportation has built a new access road to the school and a new red light was installed this week at the entrance on S.R. 715.

Dr. Grear, who has been the principal at Glades Central since 1976, said she has been working seven days a week at the new school to get ready for this week's opening. Approximately 85 teachers are at the new school.

Belle Glade Elementary students were hopeful they would also be in their new school this week, but delays in construction have pushed the transfer back for a while. The new school is on Avenue L, across from Glades Ford.

American Heart Association offers Glades area students chance to learn more than three R's

It's as simple as A-B-C; Glades area students should learn more than the three R's in the classroom.

They should also learn about the benefits of a healthful lifestyle, the American Heart Association says.

That's why the AHA is offering local schools a chance to participate in its schoolsite programs.

"The kits present heart health information that encourage fun learning activities for small groups and individuals," said Lee Sutterfield, president of the American Heart Association's Glades Division.

The lessons focus on diet, exercise, smoking and the circulatory system. Materials include a teacher's guide, colorful posters, worksheets, and audio and video tapes. The programs are:

- Heart Treasure Chest for 3-5 year-olds in preschool and kindergarten;
- Getting To Know Your Heart for children in grades 1-3 (lower elementary) and grades 4-6 (upper elementary);
- Heart Decisions for middle school students in grades 7-9; and
- Heart Challenges for students in grades 10-12.

Local schools which have the American Heart Association

Schoolsite kits include Belle Glade Elementary, Canal Point Elementary, Glades Central Community High School, Glades Day School, Gladeview Elementary, Gove Elementary, Pahokee Elementary, Pahokee Middle-High School, Palm Beach County Head Start and Rosenwald Elementary School.

For more information, contact the American Heart Association's Glades Division, Dot Lynch at 1-800-AHA-USA1 (1-800-242-8721). The AHA is the largest health voluntary organization fighting heart disease and stroke, which annually kill more than 923,000 Americans.

"Success For All": goal of Belle Glade Elementary

By Buffie Chapman
Staff Writer

Success for all their students is the intention of Belle Glade Elementary School and the goal of the Johns Hopkins University's "Success For All" program.

"Success For All" is a school-wide restructuring program for students in grades pre-K to five. The idea behind this program is to organize resources to focus on prevention and early intervention, to ensure that every student will succeed in reading throughout the elementary grades.

At Belle Glade Elementary, the School Improvement Committee (SIC) and Instructional Innovative Team (IIT), made up of faculty and teachers, helped do research to find a program which would benefit students of this area. They searched the county for a program that would innovate students to learn and decided that the "Success For All" program had what they were looking for. Glenda Garrett, principal at Belle Glade Elementary for the past two years, is supportive of the program.

"In order for the program to work, the community and parents must be involved. We need students to be in school in order for them to learn the things we are teaching," said Success For All facilitator/teacher Mary Kendall.

"Success For All" at Belle Glade Elementary is divided into three divisions: early learning, beginning reading, and beyond basics. Teachers are trained in each division. Students in Pre-K to Fifth grade are immersed in reading, writing, speaking and listening skills in order to excel in the overall learning process. All of the teachers in the school are involved in the "Success For All" program with the exception of the Physical Education, Art, and Music teachers.

"If teachers, parents and students are involved from the beginning, this will make for a fruitful community and Success For All," said Facilitator Mary Kendall.

Johns Hopkins University is the center for social organization of schools. In April, 1989, a presentation by Dr. Robert Slavin, Johns Hopkins University, began a two-year planning process which brought the establishment of "Success For All" to two elementary schools. It is an organized, systematic plan of strategies, teaching, models, instructional materials and support activities which are aimed at preventing student failure in reading. As of the 1994-1995 school year, Success For All is being implemented in more than 200 schools in 69 districts in 20 states in all parts of the United States.

Components of "Success For All" are Reading and Writing Programs, Cooperative Learning, Preschool and Kindergarten, Tutors, Eight-Week Assessments, Family Support Teams, Facilitator, Staff Support Teams, and Professional Development.

The results for students who use the Success For All program compared to those who do not use the program are: Success For All students perform approximately three months ahead of comparison students by first grade, seven months ahead by fifth grade, and more than a year ahead by fifth grade. Positive effects have also been found on district-administered standardized tests.

Success For All is typically funded by reallocations of existing Chapter 1, state compensatory education, and special education funds. There is no extra cost to initiate the program at Belle Glade Elementary. Monies allotted to the school are based on the number of students in attendance. The money is used to purchase books, supplies, programs, etc. The school decided to use some of these monies to initiate the program; which in turn, will benefit student learning.

In order to adopt the Success For All program in schools, the district and building administrators should support the program, and school staff should have an opportunity to learn about and vote on the program. A positive vote of 80% or more is required. At Belle Glade Elementary, the vote passed with an approximate 86 percent.

Bank of Belle Glade wins seventh CBF "Winners Circle" award

Conventioning community bankers from throughout Florida will honor a South Florida community bank for an unprecedented seventh consecutive year with the prestigious 1995 Winners' Circle Award.

The Bank of Belle Glade will be among the Florida banks honored for "outstanding performance in Florida's banking industry" by the Community Bankers of Florida (CBF) at their convention Aug. 23-25.

The award is the highest honor a member of the 361 independent, locally-owned community full service and savings banks in Florida can receive from CBF.

"Our success is a tribute to our dedication to hometown banking in the communities of Belle Glade, Pahokee and South Bay, and it underscores our 32-year heritage of locally owned and managed service," said W. Wayne Mikell, president of the bank.

The fact that Bank of Belle Glade continues to be a pace-setting community bank in the state speaks highly for the strength and vitality of the local economy of Western Palm Beach County," commented Bank of Belle Glade Board Chairperson Dolly Hand.

Community banks must show exceptional performance and strength to qualify for the award. Winners are judged on the financial performance during the past year. Strength, liquidity, and the bank's loan performance are all considerations and are judged against banks of similar size nation-wide. The announcement was made by CBF President Joe Williams, who offered congratulations on behalf of the CBF.

(Founded in 1963, the Bank of Belle Glade was among the community banks to receive a charter "Winner's Circle" award in 1989. President Mikell is a former recipient of the association's "Banker of the Year" award.)

The $45 million bank provided local employment for more than 35 at the main office at 106 S.E. Avenue D in Belle Glade and the full service branch located in S.

Weather has always played an important role in war

By Mike Lyons

General George Washington was in trouble. His army was trapped by the British. What's more he had violated one of the most important rules in war: always leave room for a retreat.

Retreat seemed impossible on this January day. A filed of mud was behind the army, the British were in front and an icy river was on the side. General Washington was in trouble.

Yet, Washington knew a thing or two about the weather. He noticed the wind was blowing from the northwest. If it continued from that direction Washington knew it would freeze the muddy field.

The wind stayed steady from the northwest all day. The field froze and Washington was able to make an end run around the British.

Weather has always played an important role in war. It is often the key to victory or defeat.

The correct weather forecast was never more important than during the Second World War. It was during WW II that the meteorologist became an essential member of America's armed forces.

At its peak during the summer of 1944, over 20,000 men and women worked for the military's weather service. Yet, they were soldiers, too. Meteorologists were among the first waves of Americans that stormed ashore Pacific islands.

Many weather stations were mobile, set up on trucks that followed the troops. World War II meteorologist David Ludlum says he moved right along with the front. "I set up in 48 different places in Europe and forecasted the weather there," he said.

Ludlum said the military wanted reports on wind direction, rain and cloud cover just about every hour on the hour. "They needed to know the cloud cover and visibility for flying and for bombing."

For long range bombing missions special reconnaissance flights were dispatched. These weather watchers flew fighters to the primary and secondary targets where they checked out cloud cover, wind speeds and cloud heights. It was pretty tough work. More than one weatherman was killed when his reconnaissance plan was shot down. On Sept. 4, 1944, Captain Randolph Williams, the man who started the Air Corps Weather Service, was killed on a reconnaissance mission.

In fact, a weatherman was America's first casualty during the war. Captain Robert Losey, the head of the Army Air Corps Weather Service, was killed during a German air raid on Dombas, Norway in April of 1940. Five military weather forecasters were killed in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Every forecast during the war was important but none more so than the weather prediction for the D-day invasion. It was called the most important weather forecast in history. The meteorologists couldn't afford to be wrong. They weren't.

Yet, had the invasion been delayed until the next time tide conditions were favorable the troops would have encountered the worst June storm in the English Channel in 20 years. "When General Eisenhower was shown the weather maps for June 19, he reportedly said "Thank God, we went when we did."

"Some are weatherwise, some are otherwise." Benjamin Franklin said that over 200 years ago. When it comes to war, knowing which way the wind is going to blow can be a tactical advantage.

Mike Lyons is the weatherman for WPBF, Channel 25.

We would like to express our deepest thanks to all of our loving friends for the tremendous kindness and concern shown towards us on the death of our mother and grandmother, Joyce Hawk. Her sudden passing was a shock to us and we deeply appreciate all the cards, phone calls, flowers, food, prayers and Christian support offered at this time. Each and every gesture will always be remembered and treasured. May God bless you all.

Healthfirst

If someone warned you that a potential "bomb" would be going off near you, would you pay attention? The "bomb" that six out of ten Americans by age 60 will have a problem with will require them to take medication to control it. Most Americans don't shake with fear and trepidation when the words "high blood pressure" are mentioned...but maybe we should.

When people are first diagnosed with hypertension, the doctor hands down a specific plan for them to follow. Many times it includes a life-style change, such as losing weight, quitting smoking, reducing dietary fat and sodium intake, restricting alcohol, etc.

Others regimes may include medication and diet combinations, exercise, potassium and calcium supplements, and stress reduction techniques.

After awhile, the person begins to feel better and they come to the mistaken conclusion that they do not need to take the medication because they "feel fine."

As health care educators we want to sometimes "shake" them and remind them that they feel good BECAUSE of the medicine, not in spite of it. If they have no obvious symptoms they may be tempted to forget about those serious life-style changes and stop taking their medicine - and ultimately become hypertensive again. Once you have been diagnosed with high blood pressure, you can never lower your risk back to where it was. By the time many people's hypertension is discovered, they have suffered some damage to their heart, eyes, kidneys, or brain.

Once you have hypertension, it needs to be managed by a physician for the rest of your life. And while drugs that lower blood pressure are life-savers, they come with a cost...economic and otherwise. Sexual impotence in men is the most common side effect.

Over the years I've spent in nursing, many men have told me they will just take their chances with the "high blood" as long as all their equipment will continue to function. This is a serious choice; a life threatening one. The only way to end the problem of hypertension is to prevent it.

A woman told me the other day that she chewed on pieces of aloe for her high blood pressure. She was almost apoplectic in her belief that the aloe plant kept her pressure down. When I asked her if she was taking any medicine she replied, "Oh, honey, I always take my pills just like the doctor told me to."

She just hadn't put two and two together and realized that the medicine is controlling her pressure, not the aloe. I feel the key to management of hypertension is patient education and compliance. Everyone should take responsibility for their own health and well-being. Have your blood pressure checked frequently and keep those appointments with your physician.

It's not fair to put all the burden for your individual health in the hands of a physician who has hundreds of patients to manage, if you do not follow his instructions. Do your part and it will make his job much easier.

Until next time...stay informed and stay healthy.

Farm Bureau dinner and awards ceremony scheduled for Sept. 7

The Western Palm Beach County Farm Bureau annual dinner meeting will be Thursday, Sept. 7, at the Belle Glade Elks Lodge, according to Farm Bureau President Rick Roth.

The event, which has become the "official kickoff of the new season," concludes with the announcement of the annual Western Palm Beach County Farm Family of the Year. The coveted award recognizes a Glades area farm family for maintaining a heritage of upholding traditional American farm values.

Civic and community volunteer service and reliance on agriculture for livelihood are principal considerations for the board of judges comprised of former Farm Family winners, says President Roth.

The event begins with a social hour at 6 p.m. followed by dinner at 7 p.m. The annual election of directors for the 1995-96 service year will be conducted during a business session following dinner. Local Farm Bureau directors are elected directly by vote of the membership.

Agriculture's contribution to the economy will be the focus for the speaker for the evening. Dr. Thomas O. Morgan, vice president for communications for A. Duda and Sons, is a speaker who usually takes the message of agriculture to urban audiences.

His message will remind the Farm Bureau audience of agricultural producers of the need for a healthy, viable agricultural economy in the United States.

Dr. Morgan is a former radio newscaster, television producer and director, and university professor.

President Roth reminded Farm Bureau members the annual meeting is usually filled to capacity and advance tickets are necessary. Tickets are $15 each and are available from the Farm Bureau office at Hooker Highway and State Road 441 (Main Street extension) in Belle Glade.

More information is available from the Farm Bureau office at 996-0343 Monday through Friday.

Bike path needs fixed

"I live out on Airport Road and this bike trail out here needs mowing. I'm wondering, since the city can't seem to get it mowed who we could hire to get it mowed and charge the city?"

The city finds the time to mow your lot (if the grass gets high) and then they charge you. The city doesn't seem interested in trying to mow it. We try to walk out here on Airport Road and the weeds have grown over the sidewalk.

Could we possibly get something done or hire someone to do the work and charge the city?

Thank you."

Response from City Manager Lomax Harrell: "In response to the speaker concerning maintenance of the bike path on Airport Road, I appreciate your concern and interest. However, the bike paths are maintained by Palm Beach County and are out of the City of Belle Glade's maintenance jurisdiction. I have notified Commissioner Ken Foster's office concerning this complaint and I anticipate the matter will be addressed as soon as possible."

Editor's note: We just heard from Raymond Plank, the supervisor for the county roads department. He said he was told of this complaint by Commissioner Ken Foster's office. He got the bike path mowed. Mr. Plank said the path is usually mowed every two weeks, but with the heavy rains, it may have been three weeks since the last mowing. He also agreed to spray weed killer on the grass that is coming up in the cracks on the path.

Is The Sun hiding the news?

"Yes. Why don't you print the news instead of trying to hide everything?"

Why don't you put in there about all these armed robberies at these Timesavers and everything instead of keeping people in the dark?"

Editor's note: There have apparently been three Timesaver robberies in the past three weeks, according to police. One was a repeat robbery at the same store. Police say they are trying very hard to catch the suspect and are reluctant to give much publicity to the incident believing it could hinder the investigation.

We cover a great deal of the police news in the Glades and print a weekly police blotter for Belle Glade and Pahokee in addition to front page stories. We're sorry you feel our coverage is inadequate. We feel we devote a large portion of our coverage to police news.

Thank you for Speaking Out."

Editors note: The POLICE NEWS in this newspaper lists arrests, not convictions, unless otherwise stated. Arrested persons who later are found not guilty or have had the charges against them dropped are welcome to let us know. We will confirm the information and print it.

Departments of Agriculture stands behind sugar and peanut programs

Reaffirming that American consumers have been the beneficiaries of current government sugar and peanut farm programs, the Southern Association of State Departments of Agriculture (SASDA) voted to stand behind a strong 1995 Farm Bill that includes a renewal of these programs.

Sponsored by the agricultural commissioners of Florida, Georgia and North Carolina, and passed unanimously by the representatives of 12 other states as well as the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, the resolution recognized the "fundamental necessity of maintaining domestic control of our food supply." It also emphasized that current sugar and peanut policies provide American consumers with a stable and affordable food supply and insures American farmers a level playing field.

Florida Commissioner of Agriculture Bob Crawford added that, "Our competitors overseas are heavily subsidized, and until those anti-free trade policies are totally eliminated, the United States must continue to support its farmers. Otherwise, our agricultural industries will be destroyed by unfair competition leaving America dependent of foreign governments for its essential foods."

The purpose of American farm policy has been to preserve and protect our nation's agricultural stability, according to SASDA.

The group noted that the sugar and peanut programs are an important component of this policy, creating over 5000,000 jobs and more than $27 billion in annual economic impact.

In just the southern United States, these two farming industries alone account for more than 200,000 jobs and more than $3 billion in annual economic impact.

As a result, thousands of families and their small, rural communities will be adversely and permanently impacted if the sugar and peanut programs are eliminated as advocated by groups attacking the government programs that support these industries.

The SASDA delegates noted that the American sugar policy operates at no cost to the government. They emphasized that it therefore makes no sense to abandon a successful farm policy and send American jobs overseas to benefit highly subsidized European growers. The American peanut program is seeking no-cost reforms similar to those already in the sugar program.

The Southern Association of State Departments of Agriculture, which consists of commissioners and other representatives of the departments of agriculture of Arkansas, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, met in West Palm Beach, last month, at which time they approved the resolution in support of the sugar and peanut programs.

Laugh your way to the top

Survey shows a good sense of humor can take you far

Apparently, climbing the corporate ladder is a laughing matter, according to top executives in a new survey. More than 90 percent of respondents said they believe a good sense of humor is key for advancement.

The survey was developed by Accountemps, the world's largest temporary staffing service for accounting, finance and bookkeeping. It was conducted by an independent research firm, which polled 150 executives from the nation's 1,000 largest companies.

Executives were asked, "How important is a good sense of humor in reaching senior management levels?" Their responses:

Very important	45%
Somewhat important	46%
Not very important	6%
Not at all important	2%
Not sure/don't know	1%
	100%

Mr. Messmer does not advise taking notes during slapstick comedies, however. "A sense of humor must be appropriate for the professional setting of an office."

Low key and understated humor works best. Practical jokes and wisecracks won't take you very far, and will only harm your chances for career advancement.

"This survey counters the notion that the serious, stoic worker is more likely to get promoted," said Dan DeNisco, Accountemps regional president. "When people are confident enough to laugh at situations and at themselves, they are easier to work with."

"Not my child" ... Kids and head lice

By Melissa Reeves
Florida Pest Control Assoc.

As kids go back to school this year, they'll be bringing lots of new things home. New books, new assignments and, unfortunately, new cases of head lice. When it happens, it's embarrassing but not so unusual. So the Florida Pest Control Association and its member companies offer the following prevention, detection and treatment methods should your family face an infestation.

How do they spread?

There is little that can be done to prevent infestation. Just because a child turns up infested does not mean that child is the source of the problem.

School-age children are more likely than adults to share brushes, combs and caps - and that's how the pests are passed on.

The simplest way to check for lice is a vigorous brushing of the hair while the person's head is over a towel. Dislodged lice will be easily seen on the light-colored surface.

Any child who has abrasions on the scalp or whose head scratching seems excessive is displaying the symptoms and should be carefully examined.

What should I do?

Seeing just one louse calls for immediate treatment. All family members should be checked and you should notify a child's teacher or the parents of child friend the child has been around. There are several over-the-counter "pediculicide" products that kill lice and nymphae, but they do not kill the eggs. Usually one or two treatments at seven to 10 day intervals are needed. A special comb is generally provided to remove the louse eggs.

Brushes and combs should be washed in hot water and clothing, bed linens and other personal items can be washed in hot soapy water and dried in the dryer for at least 20 minutes. Mattresses and carpeting should be vacuumed.

"Remember that detection and quick treatment are the best responses to head lice infestation."

CAP is help for those in need

By Buffle Chapman
Staff Writer

Workers for South Bay's Community Action Program (CAP) say they are committed to helping impoverished residents in this city. They are doing just that by rallying community resources and support. The federally-funded program is located at 805 Palm Beach Road, South Bay.

The Community Action movement has, for almost 30 years, responded to the needs of low-income Americans inadequately served by federal, state and local programs. Its goal has been the elimination of dependency and the promotion of self-sufficiency.

Supervisor Mary Allen, Community Specialist IV, has been with the agency for almost 25 years. Mrs. Allen started out as a cook and has moved up several times in her career with the agency. Neighborhood Services Council to Community Specialist I, and now into her present job of Community Specialist IV, Supervisor.

Community Action depends upon community agencies, organizations, businesses and individuals that support and work collaboratively with the program to serve the city's most vulnerable individuals and families through volunteers who donate their time, and any type of clothes, furniture, etc.

Services are free of charge for all low-income individuals in Palm Beach County whose annual incomes are within Federal Poverty Guidelines.

"For the future, CAP is trying to organize a community target meeting to find out some of the needs for residents in the South Bay community," said Mary Allen. "There has not been much participation with these meetings in the past, hopefully there will be more people interested this time."

Some of the programs Community Action (CAP) provides are:

- Services to the Homeless which is a street campaign, designed to help give comfort, preventative health services and dignity to those in need. Services provided include: food vouchers, personal hygiene kits, bus passes, clothes, personal and employment counseling, and information and referral services.
- Utility Assistance (Low

Income Home Energy Assistance Program or LIHEAP) which is designed to provide financial relief from high-energy costs and to prevent service disconnections for families in crisis. Community Action also provides short-term rent or mortgage assistance to enable families to remain in their homes. Emergency lodging is provided for those who need more than one-time assistance.

- Unfortunately, Food and Nutrition which has distributed USDA commodities to 2,000 low-income families each month was stopped in June due to insufficient participation and funding.

- Income Tax Assistance: In 1977, the Community Action Program staff began attending volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) training conducted by the IRS. Since that time, staff and volunteers have assisted low-income families in preparing their income tax returns.

- Kidney Dialysis Transportation is available for eligible kidney dialysis patients, residing in the Glades. This service provides transportation to and from dialysis treatment and doctor appointments and is offered six days a week, 52 weeks a year.

- Other services CAP provides are: GED classes, employment counseling and placement, Thanksgiving turkeys, clothing, furniture and household items, consumer education classes, after-school tutoring and Med-Mobile sites. "We work primarily by donations in trying to clothe, give household items, etc.," said Ms. Allen.

If you have any further questions or comments about the Community Action Program you should feel free to call their office at (407) 996-0660. Ask to speak to Community Specialist I, Gayle Love or Mary Allen.

Community Action Program's Community Specialist IV Supervisor, Mary Allen, explains the different types of programs CAP offers the South Bay Community.
